Play your part in Staffordshire's sustainable business community

Businesses who understand the environment have bright futures.

Join the thriving Staffordshire Business and Environment Network (sben) and get insight and inspiration to increase your businesses competitiveness and profitability, while improving environmental performance and reducing environmental impacts.

Organisations across the county are working together to protect the environment, which in turn will create a brighter future with resilient businesses.

sben provides the framework to advance this pioneering work. We've been supporting our members for more than 30 years, connecting, supporting and growing the skills of Staffordshire businesses and organisations.

Environmental factors are increasingly becoming a core operational element for successful businesses, with supply chain pressure, stakeholder expectations and the continuous stream of environmental legislation all needing to be considered.

Regardless of the scope and scale of your business, sben can help you navigate these challenges ahead.

It's a great time to connect with the network. Annual membership is currently fully-funded, so it's free to join.

Don't miss out.

A proven track record

sben was launched in 1992 as a membership organisation. It is led by businesses in our network, with a Chair and management committee, all supported by Staffordshire County Council.

Professionalism, reliability and value for money are the cornerstones of our approach, and ensure we offer a proven track record and an enviable reputation for quality and customer service.

A message from our Chair

Adam Whitehouse,
Chair of the Staffordshire
Business and Environment
Network (sben)

"Transitioning to sustainable practices is a journey filled with challenges, from understanding the sometimes-complex environmental regulations to implementing cost-effective green technologies. Recognising these hurdles, sben is committed to guiding businesses through these complexities. We offer networking, funded support, tailored advice, and practical tools to help you measure, monitor, and reduce your carbon footprint effectively. Our aim is to transform these challenges into opportunities for innovation and growth.

"Through collaboration, innovation, and shared learning, we will drive Staffordshire's businesses towards greater competitiveness, profitability, and environmental responsibility.

"Together, we will make the County a beacon of sustainable business practices. Join us in this vital mission, and let's create a legacy of sustainability that will resonate for generations to come.
